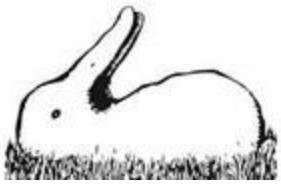
These questions are designed to help us understand you better. There are no right or wrong answers, so don't feel bad if you think some of the questions are too hard. Please don't go online to search for the answers or ask another person for help. We've already looked, so we will know whether or not you are doing this. If you can think of more than one answer, write them all down. Use your best handwriting or type your answers on another page. If you aren't sure about an answer, then give it your best guess.

Two of your classmates are having an argument. One is saying the picture is showing a bunny, and the other is saying it's showing a duck. How do you respond?



You are given the following sequence. What does 'X' represent? 1b, 0b, b8, 88, X, 98

How much would you charge to wash all the windows in Indianapolis?

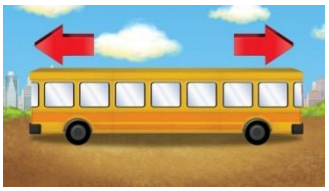
If you know for sure that something the teacher said in a lecture is incorrect, what would you do?

Write a short letter to your teacher explaining what they need to know about you.

What is your favorite joke?

You're the captain of a pirate ship and your crew gets to vote on how the gold is divided up. If fewer than half of the pirates agree with you, you die. How do you divide the gold in such a way that you get as much gold as possible but still survive?

Is the bus going left or right? Explain your answer.



You discover a time machine that can send just one Twitter message back in time to any one real person who ever lived, but they won't be able to reply back. You only get 140 characters, and spaces count as a character. If they spoke a different language, your tweet will automatically be translated. If you try to cheat and send more than 140 characters, your message will fail. Who do you send the tweet to, and what is your message?

What is something you're proud of?

Use the rest of this page in any way you want to.
